Dear Deidre,

We have already gone through this. You and my JustAsk.com attorney told me I could appeal your decision to Lee Bollinger. I did so with a letter mailed with a certificate of mailing to Jane Booth. I called her office yesterday asking why I had not received a response from Bollinger. I can't believe that Jane Booth told you to tell me not to contact her any more. I posted my letter and the certificate of mailing on my website at <http://www.newevangelist.me>.

When Fr. O'Reilly declined my offer to give a lesson on God's existence, he violated the academic freedom of his students. But, he put it in writing. He took responsibility for his decision, and I complained to his superiors.

The University Chaplain is not taking responsibility for her decision. She is using you to deprive Columbia students of the opportunity to learn about the arguments for God's existence. I have every right to interpret Bollinger's and Booth's refusal to answer my letter as a repudiation of your actions.

Jane Booth is a Fordham graduate as am I. My dealings are now with her. Please tell Ms. Booth that I want an appointment to see her. I want to tell her the same story I told you.

Very truly yours,
David Roemer
