Dear Bernadette,

This is a draft of a letter I'm planning to send the Members of the Committee Evangelization and Catechesis if someone does not meet with me so I can explain these matters and listen to their opinions and reactions:

The Magis Center (<http://www.magiscenter.com>) has six cardinals and bishops on its board and promotes the intellectual and moral error that recent discoveries in physics should be used to persuade people that God exists. The Magis Center is supporting the nonsense that a "trans-universal (supernatural) power" created the universe because there is no other explanation for its origin 13.7 billion years ago (Big Bang), the "fine-tuning of physical constants," and the vagaries of quantum mechanics. In my opinion, this is pseudoscience and undermines the reasons to believe in Jesus.

There are two arguments, not proofs, for God's existence. One is based on the existence of humans and the other on morality. They both can be summarized as follows:

FREE WILL + HAND WAVING

The arguments promoted by the Magis Center and many others, I must admit, is this:

BIG BANG + CIRCULAR REASONING

The Magis Center also promotes the theory that the Shroud of Turin is authentic and is helping the American Journal of Physics cover-up a mistake it made in publishing an absurd article about biological evolution and thermodynamics. I'd like an appointment to explain to you why the Catholic Church should withdraw its endorsement of the Magis Center. I have already written about these three issues:

The last link contains an exchange with Robert Kurland who was once affiliated with the Magis Center.

Concerning my slideshow (<http://www.holyshroud.info>) about the Shroud of Turin, which the USCCB has tried to suppress, I translated it into six other languages. From May 18 to June 27, there have been 4891 visits to these websites. In this same time period, there have been 724 visits to the site where I posted my canonical complaint against Cardinal Dolan.

Very truly yours,
David Roemer
